

Finally, Juliet realizes that her love for Romeo is complicated and impossible, because their families hate each other and they will never get along. For this reason she decides to marry Paris, who has been chosen by her parents. After having married him, they move in a Paris's family residence in Milan, even though she didn't love him. They spend unforgettable days, until an epidemic of plague spreads. When Juliet's parents find out what is happening in Milan, they want Juliet to come back home. But she can not manage to inform Paris because he has gone out of Milan to meet his friend. When he comes back to Milan, he dies. Juliet now is widow she's not very sad but she prefers to stay in Verone with her family. When Romeo gets to know the news, he decides to return to Verone to meet Juliet. While going to Juliet's house he meets the Nurse and she helps him to come in the garden secretly. When he arrives he sees Juliet in the balcony.

He calls her and she quickly run down the stairs throwing herself into his arm. Romeo and Juliet fall in love again, so the Nurse decides to help them. They go to Friar Laurence, because they need a place to hide. So Friar Laurence suggests an old barn. Juliet's parents are concerned, but the Nurse calms them, saying that Juliet has gone to Mantua to meet a dear friend. For the couples times are difficult, but their love is strong enough to overcome all obstacles. After a few months Juliet is pregnant. So Romeo and Juliet ask Friar Laurence to talk with their families about this. He talks with them and finally succeeds. The Capulets meet the Montagues and they decide all together to accept the love between Romeo and Juliet. They promise also to avoid any other fight for the sake of the child who will be born. Since both the families want Romeo and Juliet to stay with them, Romeo and Juliet decide to build a new house, near to the families. From that day, they became a big family living happily forever.
